

As a lifetime resident of Indiana, I welcomed the No Call law that Indiana recently put into effect. Prior to signing up to be on the No-Call list, I was receiving approximately 20-30 unsolicited marketing calls per month. Since I have been on the No Call list, I haven't received any unsolicited calls and I enjoy that. With 3 small children at home, my night times are important to me and don't care to be bothered with unsolicited calls for any reason. If you must put some Federal Law into effect, investigate what Indiana has done and try to design your law around what Indiana has done. If someone wants to contact me for potential future business, they can use the Postal system. That has been around longer than you and I, and it can be just as effective as their phone calls. Please don't allow businesses to invade our privacies. If you want to do something good for the country, investigate Unsolicited emails. They don't remove you from their mailing lists when you reply and ask them to be removed.
